Stalin's genocide - A diabolical entity
Mao's genocide - 85 millions.

Stalin's genocide has been estimated by K.G.B. at at least 40 million murders and that is required readings in Russian schools. Solzhenitsyn has estimated the holocaust at up to 60 million.

Mao's genocide has been estimated at 85 million by a Chinese news woman and member of parliament in Hong Kong the day before the transfer to China. Or Peter Worthington in Toronto Sun, 8 April 97, Pg. 11, "An estimated 80 million Chinese died at the hands of Mao - some 30 million while Trudeau Canadian prime minister for 16 years, was praising him." These were the finest people in their respective countries. Don't they deserve at least an annual mass, light a candle or display some black cloth? 1st of May would be a befitting day of mourning and a nice Y2K gift. A comment. What's really scary is that monsters like Pol Pot may appear in the future. People are still teaching the ideas that created him.

If the media were interested in informing us about communist's plague 5% as much as of Nazis there wouldn't have been a cold war with 55,000 American casualties in Korea then Vietnam with more death and many more in other places plus 50 years of bleeding economy. But even worse the destruction of ethics world wide with the godless idea. I do what I want, and only I count, we only go this way once, let's have fun. It's amazing how many friends Stalin has world wide and Mao was even called "A colossus" by P.E. Trudeau. Stalin, Mao and Hitler should be treated with equal glaring publicity. Most of these terrible tragedies this century could be blamed on Darwin's Evolution which produced a godless lawless society in a free-fall as proven in Manifesto, particularly in the excommunist countries more afflicted with the plague. Now that the science has discovered in undeniable terms the Anthropic Principle, which means that the universe has been created by a Superior Intelligence, this name is not to be found in dictionaries, encyclopedias, media or God forbid in classroom. ## INTERVIEWERS

To be called to account publicly for everything one has said, even in jest, in an excess of high spirits, or in momentary anger, may possibly be awkward, yet to a point it is reasonable and natural. But to be called to account publicly for what others have said in one's name, when one cannot defend oneself, is indeed a sad predicament. "But to whom does such a thing happen?" you will ask. Well, everyone who is of sufficient interest to the public to be pursued by interviewers. You smile incredulously, but I have had plenty of direct experience and will tell you about it.

Imagine the following situation. One morning a reporter comes to you and ask you in a friendly way to tell him something about your friend N. At first you no doubt feel something approaching indignation at such a proposal. But you soon discover there is no escape. If you refuse to say anything, the man writes: " I asked one of N's supposedly best friends about him. But he prudently avoided my questions. This in itself enable the reader to draw thru inevitable conclusions." There is, therefore, no escape, and you give the following information: Mr. N is a cheerful, straight forward man, much liked by all his friends. He can find a bright side to any situation. His enterprise and industry know no bounds; his job takes up his entire energies. He is devoted to his family and lays everything he possesses to his wife's feet....."

Now for the reporter's version: Mr. N takes nothing very seriously and has a gift of making himself liked, particularly as he cultivate a hearty and ingratiating manner. He is so completely a slave to his job that he has no time for the consideration of any non-personal subject or for any extracurricular mental activity. He spoils his wife unbelievably and is utterly under her thumb...."

A real reporter would make it much more spicy, but I expect this will be enough for you and your friend N. He reads the above, and some more like it and his rage against you knows no bounds, however cheerful and benevolent his natural disposition may be. The injury done to him gives you untold pain, especially as you are really fond of him. What's your next step, my friend? If you know, tell me quickly so that I may adopt your method with all speed.

SUGGESTION. Send him immediately a recording of conversation and warn him of what he may find in the paper next day.

Man has acted against the foundations of wisdom, the classical Greeks, The Bible, and modern psychology which overlap so much, it seems to be one. In this century of knowledge man is unleashing passions and vices which overpower logic, reason, and shame driving a man's soul in a downward vortex as any average person could see. If we forget our mistakes, we are bound to repeat them and without ethics, morals and a sense of duty life itself may become hardly worth living even if the stomach and the senses are satisfied.

In the 20th century we had unprecedented scientific progress, knowledge and wealth but also unparalleled calamities. The eternal liar and murderer, trying to get political movements with the power and the right of the rancher, by bloody terror, force of arms, or by sweet poison of libertinism and vices which brought the biblical blood bath hate and misery world wide. Those who would like to see the dissolution of the faith, family and the fundamental values, would do well to go see the difference between East/West Germany, after only one generation and may go to Cambodia also. Historically the evolution of a successful society, whether by superior arms, wealth, more knowledge or whatever favoring factors, has developed first pride, then aloofness intransigence, contempt, insolence, impertinence, compulsion, rot and ruthlessness, then fight for survival.

Eisenhower has put it much simpler: "Total power, total corruption."

Some of the conflict between science and meaning has been administrative, traceable to researcher's needs to win academic freedom in university systems once flavoured by church politics. It is useful to recall that, as recently as Victoria's reign, the Anglican Church controlled hiring decisions at Cambridge and Oxford.

One reason Charles Darwin was so touted by the British scientific establishment, while Alfred Russell Wallace, the co-discoverer of evolutionary theory, was practically blackballed, was that Darwin was an agnostic who threw the rector class into a tizzy, while Wallace was a believer who spoke about "the unseen universe of spirit" (Einstein mused about "discoveries by decree,"). As more and more scientists are coming on the side of Creation, I hope the year 2000 will bring the funeral of evolution and the birth of "adaptation".

As we at the Archimedes Foundation are not interested in donations or organizations, we only sound the biblical trumpet and let the chips fall where they may. Perhaps this comes to you as a shock but we have been listening to one side of the story for some 50 years and been shielded from knowing even the worst evils some of which are still running strong today. Concealing a crime is also a crime in any court of law, terrestrial or celestial. Under a communist regime, I had to listen to their endless diabolical indoctrinating diatribe. Never again.

There are clear references to today's world in Revelation 17:18-19. You'll be surprised. We are fed sweet poison. One drop at time. Start thinking or other people will do the thinking for you. Archimedes Foundation.
